HOMEMADE Snow Skin Mooncake

Homemade- Snow Skin Mooncake

29 August 2014

Children love to play with dough, and the process of mixing, kneading, and molding also helps to improve their coordination and motor skills.

Here at SPARKS Student Care, together with our kids, we got into a time of mooncake snow skin making for their family members.

Unlike traditional mooncakes, snowskin mooncakes do not require any baking. The mixing of flour and food colorings activates the dough.

Children were so proud of their homemade snow skin mooncake and ready to give their family a treat.

Most importantly, they do not have to wait till the Mid-Autumn festival to taste the mooncake. The children can pull the ingredients from the shelf and they are ready to do this with their family members for a tasty treat.

ERIC CARLE - TECHNIQUES

A three day course where kids use plain paper and paint it with acrylic paint using different materials to create texture to the painting. These papers were then used as color palette to create beautiful pictures.
